

Associate of Applied Science in Fire Science

College of Social and Behavioral Sciences

Prepare to Advance Your Career With an Associate's Degree in Fire Science.

You could use your talent and drive to advance your career, while you serve the public.<sup>1</sup> Kaplan University's fire science programs could help you pursue your goals. Our associate's degree in fire science is designed to provide knowledge in interagency coordination, fire incident command, arson investigation, and life safety education—skills relevant to today's fire service industry. The degree program is closely based on the Fire and Emergency Services Higher Education (FESHE) curriculum model and is accredited by the International Fire Service Accreditation Congress (IFSAC). And, Kaplan University's online classes offer the flexibility that fire service professionals want, along with the knowledge you may need for advancement.

Protecting Society Is More Than a Career; It's a Calling

The College of Social and Behavioral Sciences offers a wide breadth of graduate and undergraduate academic programs designed to develop professionals, leaders, and change agents in fields that make a difference in response to human and societal causes, issues, and needs. These fields are critical to service in our communities.

The Fire Service Industry Needs Talent Like Yours.

With continuing changes in the industry and the economy, fire departments may look for firefighters familiar with the latest techniques and equipment. In fact, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, physically fit applicants with high test scores, some postsecondary firefighter education, and paramedic training should have the best job prospects.<sup>2</sup> A degree from Kaplan University could help you make the most of your talent.<sup>1</sup>

Move Forward With a Fire Science Degree.

An associate's degree in fire science could help you pursue your goals, whether you are a current fire service professional looking to advance to a higher position or aspire to join the fire service field. Graduates have the potential to advance through the fire department chain of command, from firefighter to driver/operator, lieutenant or captain, battalion chief, deputy chief, assistant chief, and even fire chief.<sup>1</sup> Some of these positions may require a bachelor's degree in fire science, public administration, or a related field.<sup>2</sup> If this is one of your goals, the credits from an associate's degree can often be applied as a foundation to earn a higher degree.<sup>3</sup>

Graduates of the associate's degree program could pursue a career in any of these environments:

- › Fire stations/departments
- › Police departments
- › National parks and forests
- › Private industry fields such as insurance companies

Possible Career Opportunities and Day-to-Day Activities:<sup>1</sup>

- › Firefighter—Respond to emergency calls of all types, including fires, motor vehicle accidents, and emergency rescue operations. Fight fires and provide other emergency and life-saving assistance as needed.
- › Forest fire inspector and prevention specialist—Monitor for and fight forest fires in national forests and parks. Participate in fire prevention, including ensuring that park visitors follow fire safety precautions and rules.
- › Fire inspector—Examine the interior and exterior of buildings and structures for fire hazards. Ensure that fire codes are followed by builders or owners, and that fire safety equipment is operable, maintained, and inspected.
- › Sales—Sell and install fire protection and prevention equipment.

Our Courses Could Help Put Your Talent to Work.

Kaplan University’s fire science curriculum offers entry-level fire service professionals a chance to expand their knowledge base in the fire service field through the pursuit of a higher education degree. Closely based on the Fire and Emergency Services Higher Education (FESHE) national curriculum model, the curriculum is national in scope, content, and outcomes, providing a national core of knowledge and competencies as suggested by FESHE. Kaplan University’s associate’s degree program is designed to provide students with a broad understanding of fire science, including fire protection, prevention, and an introduction to state-of-the-art technology.

This specialized curriculum is designed to teach students the following:

- › How building construction impacts firefighter safety, building codes, and fire prevention
- › The behavior of fire, including testing procedures used to determine fire resistance and flame spread

- › Firefighting strategy and tactics, including fire defense planning and the use of computer technology
- › Components of fire investigation and analysis, including fire dynamics, flame spread, and incident investigation, plus the technical, legal, and social aspects of arson
- › Analytical approaches to fire protection and investigation, such as scientific methods of inquiry and reasoning
- › The psychological effects of fire dynamics

Our instructors are public safety professionals.

Kaplan University’s faculty members have years of experience in the fields of criminal justice and firefighting. Many are working professionals who truly understand your career requirements and the challenges you face, and offer real-world perspectives you can respect.

Here Are What Two Industry Professionals Had to Say

Derrick Clouston

› Kaplan University Program Developer and Field Service Supervisor, North Carolina Department of Insurance, Office of State Fire Marshal, Raleigh, NC

“The Kaplan University Associate of Applied Science in Fire Science is an excellent opportunity to engage in learning with fellow professionals and creates an atmosphere by which you can excel both personally and professionally.”

Jake Rhoades

› Assistant Fire Chief

“The fire service [industry] has been experiencing rapid changes, and the duties and responsibilities placed upon the individuals within each department must adapt and evolve to meet these new challenges. Formal education is critical to individual and departmental success in the future. A degree from Kaplan University could provide the formal education that an individual can immediately put to use in his/her department for the service of their community.”

Views and opinions stated herein are the individual’s and not necessarily those of Kaplan University. Individual student schedules and experiences may vary. This testimonial was solicited by Kaplan University.
